Intervention Context: WFP's activities in Burkina Faso and Niger focus on fragile agrarian communities in the Sahel, where cyclical floods and droughts combine with decreasing soil fertility and increasing desertification, among other challenges, to aggravate food and livelihood insecurity. Increased competition for land for food crops and pastures as well as water for domestic, productive, and livestock use, intensify conflicts over ownership and usage rights for land and the commons such as forests. In particular, this competition has heightened conflicts between farmers and herders. Layered on these localized conflicts are recent increases in human safety and security concerns related to the spread of attacks by violent extremist groups across the eastern flanks of both countries. The increasing frequency and intensity of these attacks have led to the loss of lives, property, and the displacement of large groups of people. The attendant deepening of food, livelihood, and human insecurities has contributed to a rural exodus of men and women to cities and other economic enclaves in search of alternate sources of food and income. The arrival of displaced persons fleeing the attacks has increased pressure on already limited food stocks and other assets of host communities. COVID-19 added another layer of vulnerability. In addition to the disease burden, lockdowns and restrictions on the movement of persons affected the ability of communities to travel to engage in nonfarm economic activities for supplementary income and food. This greatly affected the food and livelihood security systems of the populations in these already impoverished and fragile communities.

This book considers the efficacy of the common regulatory model of the licensing regime as a means of regulating animal use in England, with a particular focus on wild animals and the regime's ability to ensure animal welfare needs are met. Using information gleaned from over 550 inspection reports relating to the period 2008 through 2019, obtained using FOI Act requests, the book analyses the extent to which animals used by these industries are protected by law. Tyson analyses the limitations present in the practical application of English legislation responsible for creating a number of relevant licensing regimes. The regimes discussed include: The Zoo Licensing Act 1981, the now repealed Welfare of Wild Animals in Travelling Circuses Regulations 2012, and the Animal Welfare (Licensing of Activities Involving Animals) Regulations 2018, introduced under the Animal Welfare Act 2006. Exploring the weakness in the use of this type of regulatory model, Tyson proposes compelling recommendations for change in future policy development. Making an important contribution to the question of enforcement of animal welfare laws, this book provides useful and original insights into the implementation of licensing regimes, and will be of particular interest to scholars of animal welfare law, animal ethics, and critical animal studies.

The theme of this proceedings volume is the latest research on geomorphic characteristics and processes associated with natural hazards. Presentations cover a gamut of types of disasters throughout the world, describing research and applications of studies in the U.S. and other countries. The book begins with a collection of papers giving a basic background and philosophy of approaching an understanding of natural disasters. These are followed by papers on natural hazards in coastal areas, mountainous regions, landslides, flooding and the detrimental effects of permafrost. The book should prove valuable in gaining an insight of natural hazards and their geomorphic relations, which is imperative for prudent environmental planning in coping with disasters.

StatPearls Publishing Pharmacy-Pediatric Specialty Review and Study Guide StatPearls Publishing, LLC Abstract: Because teacher self-efficacy influences the retention of teachers, the researcher investigated teacher self-efficacy in agricultural education. The researcher sought to describe beginning agriculture teachers' perceived agricultural education teacher self-efficacy and teachers perceptions of the importance of job-related factors in their current position. Additionally, the researcher sought to describe the relationship among teachers demographic characteristics, their agricultural education teacher self-efficacy, and their intention to remain in the profession of agricultural education. An instrument specific to agricultural education was developed to answer the research questions. The instrument had three domains: classroom, FFA and SAE. The instrument was administered through both an internet based survey provider and mailed survey procedures.

Beginning teachers in this study all had less than four years of teaching experience. Almost all of the teachers intended to remain in the profession of agricultural education. Teachers reported favorable perceptions of their student teaching experience and their first year of teaching. Teachers were the most efficacious in the classroom domain, and the least efficacious in the SAE domain. This finding indicates a need for additional professional development in the SAE domain. Beginning teachers in this study reported greater levels of importance than teacher self-efficacy in all three domains. Teachers indicated that the FFA domain was the most important of the three domains and the classroom domain was the least important. This finding indicates that a paradigm shift may be required amongst teachers. The SAE domain had the greatest discrepancy between importance and teachers self-efficacy, the classroom domain had the smallest discrepancy. This conclusion further substantiates the need for professional development in the SAE domain. The teachers perceptions of their student teaching experience and their first year of teaching were positively related to their teacher self-efficacy. Males had higher teacher self-efficacy than females. Teachers who were not involved in high school agricultural education or FFA had lower teacher self-efficacy in the SAE and FFA domain, but higher teacher self-efficacy in the classroom domain. The researcher was unable to predict teacher retention as nearly all of the teachers indicated they intended to remain in the profession of agricultural education.
